New Pricing Structure At OneSky Jets

Written by OJ Fagbire

One of the world's fastest growing private aviation companies, OneSky Jets, has announced a new pricing strategy for their fractional owners and flight cardholders. The new program is called the Latitude Membership program and is designed to better meet the needs of aviation clients.

This membership program gives clients access to a team of aviation experts who will advise on the best option between using fractional jet hours or standard hours purchasing.

They have also issued a guide to fractional jet ownership and explain that while jet membership fees and services sometimes look attractive on paper; their OneSky on demand solutions may make more sense for some travelers.

The problem with fractional jet hours are that, sometimes there is another option that could provide the same private jet service, at a better price, and that is where the Latitude program is going to benefit its members. Jet owners will submit the details of their travel plans and OneSky's experts will analyze the situation to determine what option gives the best cost value solution to the client.

Sometimes the fractional hours purchased will indeed offer the best value travel, but this is not always the case.

OneSky's members report that the quality of service amongst the network of Planes at their disposal is more than satisfactory, and that the quality and flexibility of the service makes it a very attractive option for anyone who has a fractional ownership or who has purchased hours on a private jet.
